

SPRING SEMESTER BEGINS

CAMPUS CRUSADE FOR CHRIST AT VIRGINIA TECH

Coming Back Strong from Break

We've really gotten back into the full swing of things here at tech quickly. One of the most encouraging things has been the Bible study I'm co-leading. Shane, the student who said he wants to seek some truth about God, said that he went to church on his own initiative for the first time ever over break and definitely enjoyed it. More importantly, he also said that as he's engaging in our study and participating in Cru, he's very able to see God working in the lives of those around him and moving closer to believing in Him.

My co-leader and I are going to be challenging a few of the guys in the study to formal discipleship. We can easily see them pursuing Christ with their lives and want to assist them in their growth, personal maturity and ability to share the gospel with friends by meeting weekly.

Another exciting thing that happens every Spring semester is our primary student leadership, the servant team, changes leaders. I'll be coaching the outreach team again, and there are several other teams all with very promising leaders. It's been fantastic to see what changes and improvements have already been made within Cru in the few weeks that they have been in their new roles.

One other responsibility I really enjoyed being able to take on this month was to coordinate and host a summer project interest meeting for sophomores. It's an excellent opportunity for students to spend their summer nearly anywhere in the world sharing the gospel with other college students within the context of a community of believers.

Preparing for Venezuela

The team of students and I are in high anticipation of the Spring Break trip to Venezuela. Many of the pieces are coming together now as we have finalized the team, completed an abundance of forms and purchased the plane tickets.

The trip itself will be like a miniature summer project, we'll have a small group going out to share the gospel with students in Venezuela every day. As the trip grows closer, overseeing it is becoming increasingly stressful and taking up a large portion of my hours, but I'm really enjoying the opportunity to administer a large scale event aimed at reaching the world with the news of what Christ has done for us. Please keep the team and I in your prayers as we approach this trip and depart from March 5-14.

Prayer Requests.

- Planning and safety regarding the trip to Venezuela
- Shane and Adam from PY continuing to grow closer to initiating a relationship with Jesus
- Students making decisions regarding what they will be do during the summer
- Beginning Discipleship with our Bible study guys.
